

Key facts about the residents of California District 22¹

Medicaid plays a critical role in people's lives. Nearly 400,000 residents of the district rely on Medicaid for health care and protection against unaffordable medical bills. They include 180,000 children and almost 30,000 adults age 65 and older.²

Many people with incomes too high for Medicaid buy their own health insurance on Covered California. More than 20,000 district residents rely on Covered California for insurance, most of whom use enhanced premium tax credits to purchase coverage. If Congress lets those credits expire after 2025, District residents' health care costs will rise. For example:

- A 40-year-old man earning $31,000 a year would see his monthly premiums more than double, rising from $58 to $153. His annual health insurance costs would thus shoot up by more than $1,000.
- Health insurance costs would nearly quadruple for a 60-year-old couple earning $82,000, rising from $581 to $2,117 a month. The couple's annual premium costs would go up by a staggering $18,000.

More than 60,000 families in the district use the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) to help pay grocery bills. These families include:³

- Children. 35,000 of the district's SNAP families—three-fifths—have children.
- Older adults. A third of the district's SNAP families include adults age 60 or older.
- People with disabilities. 25,000 District families helped by SNAP include at least one person with disabilities.
- Low-wage workers. Almost nine in 10 district families with SNAP have bread-earners who work but do not make enough money to feed their families without help.⁴

⁴ The exact figures, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, were 60,580 District families who used SNAP to help pay food costs, including 35,466 families with children, 20,948 families with at least one adult age 60 or older, 26,039 families with at least one person with disabilities, and 52,499 families with one or more workers.
